Leptin and its receptor are known to be associated with whole-body fat mass. We sought to investigate whether leptin and its receptor expression in adipose tissue were associated with percent body fat and intra-abdominal adipose tissue (IAAT) amount in Japanese men with type 2 diabetes (T2DM). We studied 51 Japanese men with T2DM and 25 normal non-diabetic Japanese men. Serum leptin and plasma adiponectin were measured using specific RIA kits. We also measured leptin receptor expression and leptin content in adipose tissue. Percent body fat and IAAT amount were also measured by bioelectrical impedance. Leptin and adiponectin levels were lower in the T2DM group. Leptin receptor expression and leptin content in adipose tissue was also lower in T2DM. Serum leptin and leptin content in adipose tissue was negatively correlated with percent body fat and IAAT amount. These data suggest that leptin is inversely associated with the amount of body fat and IAAT in Japanese men with T2DM. Prevalence and predictors of poor sleep quality in people with acute myocardial infarction. Sleep deprivation is common in patients with acute myocardial infarction (AMI). We examined the prevalence of poor sleep quality in AMI patients. To explore the potential risk factors for poor sleep quality in these patients. We also examined the impact of poor sleep quality on the recovery of the patients. This is a prospective cross-sectional study of AMI patients admitted to Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Adelaide, South Australia, from January to June 2016. Patients completed the Pittsburgh Sleep Quality Index, Hospital Anxiety and Depression Scale, and the General Well-Being Inventory to measure sleep quality, anxiety and depression, and general well-being. To measure functional outcome, the Seattle Angina Questionnaire was used to assess health-related quality of life. Echocardiography and came to the human world on the continent of Al'ar in the Lands Between to fight back. The capital of Al'ar is the city of Atmora. The humans are dominant in this area, but below them, monsters called Darkness Giants dwell in the city of Blackfort. The city is now being attacked by the minions of the Burning Legion. The people of Blackfort and the neighboring areas are now the targets of Sargeras's invasion. In Atmora, the heroes, led by Archivist Aleyna and his companions, defeat Chaos, a Darklord possessed by the enemy. They are the first to succeed in defeating it and recover something important. Taking advantage of the information that Aleyna acquired, your party now travels to the city of Blackfort, the place where the Chaos was defeated. However, the monsters are now attacking the city all over again, and it is immediately attacked by a monster called the Harbinger. The surrounding area is filled with monsters, and the heroes are attacked by Chaos and Harbinger. Despite his issues, he was still enrolled at Auburn when he died in 2005. Williams' parents said in a recent interview they were blindsided by the university's decision to deny their son's college records request, reported WVTM-TV. The University has continued to maintain that the records are private. Williams' mom, Shirley

Green, said she was informed about the university's decision Friday night, hours before Auburn's home game against Florida, WVTM reported. The decision to deny the request didn't come from Auburn's compliance department but rather from an administrative law judge. "There's nothing that we felt I can get out of that file that we didn't get out of all of the others," Green said. "It's frustrating. We were just trying to gain a better understanding of what transpired when Eddie was a student." According to Green, Williams' parents were told they couldn't get the records unless it involved a death certificate. "We're not trying to demonize anybody at all, but we had this death certificate. And if you read it, there are known causes for death," Green said. Green said she didn't know Williams had died after enrolling at Auburn. Instead, his parents were told he had been committed to Talladega College in Alabama
